

Humanity Transitioning Into A Society Where Everyone Is Able To Think Freely And Creatively And Not Being Worried About Survival

Transition into a society where everyone is able to think freely and creatively and not being worried about survival” can be a reality through our imaginations.

Imagination makes our world even more spectacular place, We all imagine during the day, and we can use this imagination not only to come up with our next innovation, but also to devise new strategies, to problem solve, to figure out ways to achieve our goals or to improve the quality of our lives.

Even impossible dreams can someday be a reality through imagination

Leonardo da Vinci would probably have been a fascinating person to have a chat with. His inventions include the anemometer, the parachute, the giant crossbow, and his more famous helicopter and flying machine.

Da Vinci was excited about aviation in an era where the only things that flew were animals and rocks thrown from a catapult. He dreamed of people soaring in the skies, even higher than birds could go. The flying machine, or the 'ornithopter,' shows da Vinci's powerful imagination. He used nature for inspiration, looking at wing designs in bats and birds.

While da Vinci's designs never flew, it provided inspiration hundreds of years later for modern aircraft. Imagine if humans were still limited to travel by land or sea. A dream that seemed utterly impossible at the time is now a reality, and it's a reality that most of us use regularly.

You do it - even if you think you don't

We imagine even when we don't think that we are imagining. The same neural pathways are activated whether we imagine something or experience the real thing. If you are convinced that you don't have a good imagination, simply close your eyes and notice any pictures or images that appear in your mind. That's imagination!

Let your mind wander, drift away and take a few notes. You can always go through these notes later and read what you have written.

Everything that humans have achieved has started with the glimmer of imagination. The most beautiful feats of architecture, athletes winning an Olympic gold, to a child's finger-painting all started in someone's mind.

Embrace your dreams and thoughts and imagine falling through that rabbit hole. Your work as a human will improve, and your personal life will be enriched.

Imagination leads innovation we want

Through imagination we can innovate to a society where people think freely without worries , we need to set ideals that will lead to upward social mobility likes liberty, opportunity and equality.

- Liberty : People should be free from oppressive restrictions from the authority.
- Opportunity: we should create equal opportunity for all , this is done when people gets something on merit .
- equality: People should have equal right .
